The National Civil Service School, 311 East a Pilot Street, Washington, D. C. INSTRUCTION BY CORRESPONDENCE. Do you wish to enter the government service? If you do we can help you. It is our business to prepare persons for taking the Civil Service examinations, to tell them what to do and how to do it. Eighty-five thousand one hundred and thirty-eight positions are now filled by the Civil Service Commission, and we prepare people so they can pass the examinations. Have you an ordinary common-school education? If you have we can prepare you for an examination in a short time. We will give you examinations until you are prepared, marking your work just as you will be marked by the Civil Service Commission. Our charge is a mere nominal one of $10 and after you are appointed you pay a commission of 2 percent of your first year's salary. This is in our interest to fit you as soon as possible in order to get our pay in full. By a recent order of the President the number of places to be filled by the Civil Service increased from $5,726 to $3,138 or by over 50 per cent. All Government employees are now included except fourth-class postmasters and those persons classified as laborers. There never was a better time than the present in which to prepare for civil service positions. There never was a time when so many positions were open to competition as at present. We have our students in every Department of the Government. Some are now getting as high as $3,000 per annum. Many are getting $1,500, $1,000, $1,600 and $1,800. We have been engaged in preparing persons for the Civil Service for eleven years and our success is a record in the history of the Department. We are now holding literature positions because of our assistance. We refer to the National Capital and Government Printing Office, as to our ability to fulfill our promises. Address all communications to the Secretary. COURT E. WOOD, L.L.M. 311 East Capital St., Washington, D. C. June 23, 1890.

THE reason for your sudden change of plans. Your intelligence is beyond reproach. But what made you think of Mrs. Fairfax? "My dear Mr. Aynsley," she laughed, "you forget last season." "I tried to recollect." "The episode at the Cartons; the Malba night at Covent Garden," she reminded gently. "You take great interest in my welfare," I said with a laugh. "I am very glad to notice it," I added with a glance at her. "By the way," I continued after a pause, "where is Arthur?" "I never trouble about Arthur," she replied quickly, "he is so wrapped up in his books and studies that even here at Monte Carlo I see very little of him." I was amused. "You have nothing against Mrs. Fairfax?" I suggested. "Nothing whatever," she replied frankly, "I like her immensely." This helped matters, I thought. "You think she will make a good wife?" "Admirable," said Miss Verney, calmly surveying the bay. "Her experience will be invaluable." I caught sight of a couple that had just appeared on the farther end of the terrace. "You will come to the wedding?" "A slight tinge of color appeared on Miss Verney's cheeks as she turned to me. "Has it reached that stage?" I glanced at the couple and noticed they were arm in arm. "I believe so." There was a slight pause. Miss Verney played with the tassel again. "Then I suppose I must tender my congratulations," she said at length. "I believe it is customary among friends," I replied with a glance at her. She had allowed her eyes to fall on the ground. "You know she is very wealthy?" I added. "You have been most fortunate in your endeavors," she replied in deliberate tones. "I trust you'll be very happy." The couple were now opposite to where we were sitting. So engrossed were they in conversation that they had not noticed us. I felt an anticipatory shiver of enjoyment. "I do not enter into the question," I said. "Look!" She glanced up in surprise. "Arthur and Mrs. Fairfax," she whispered. "He is wrapped up in his studies again," I remarked. "I fancy he has taken the lady's eyes as his subject." Miss Verney looked at me reproachfully. "And you know this all the time?" "I'm afraid so," I replied, "I have seen me some months ago in London, and I have occasionally amused myself by helping him. Take the Malba night for instance. "Was that on Arthur's behalf?" she asked wonderingly. "I nodded. It occurred to me once again how extremely charming Miss Verney looked in white. There was a silence for a minute or so. Arthur and Mrs. Fairfax passed out of sight. "It wasn't the gambling," I remarked at length. Miss Verney made no reply. "Nor an invalid's aversion to the chill, damp fogs," I went on after a pause. "Nor Mrs. Fairfax," she put in. "No," I said slowly. "I came because I thought it just possible you might be pleased to see me." There was another pause, and then I added: "Are you?" A smile crept round the corners of Miss Verney's mouth. "Well, yes, I think I am," she said. "We see a good deal of one another now - Gilbert Dayle in London Weekly Sun. Just What She Needed. "My appetite was very poor and I was so nervous I could not sleep. I was troubled with dyspepsia and felt generally weak. After I had taken a few bottles of Hood's Serravallo I could eat anything I wished, could sleep well and was much stronger." Mrs. J. MARTIN, Werrington, North Carolina. TO A MAIDEN OF SIXTEEN. I do not fondly ask from you "The qualities of noble heart, A mind whose thoughts are pure and true, A tongue that speaks no venomous dart, A temper sweet or gentle mood, Unselfishness or high endeavor - I do not ask you to be good. Sweet maid, or even to be "clever!" I do not ask for "poet's song, For dreamer's tale, high gifts of mind, For orator's eloquence righting wrong - Gifts all, no powers, to you assigned; I do not ask for theories vast, One's powers of comprehension taking, For wisdom or for your own good. (There would not be much use in asking). I do not ask you for the gift All other gifts so far above, I will be brave and make a shift To live my life without your love - Not mine to play a lover's part, So, though the omission is distressing, I do not ask you for your love. I only ask a minor blessing. I do not ask you when we meet To condescend to notice me, But when kind fate orders that treat Frae years bear mind this modest plea: I do not ask you to sit still, For wisdom or for your own good, I'd have you do what'er you will. I only ask you - not to giggle! - Punch.

THE REAL REASON. I had arrived at Monte Carlo about 2 o'clock and after a late lunch set out in search of my friends the Vernes. I found Master Arthur, a serious minded young politician of 23, in his room at the hotel. He was completing an elaborate toilet and drinking champagne. "Aynsley!" he cried, in surprise. "I thought you were in London." "The spirit of restlessness," I explained. My eye dwelt for a moment on the champagne. "A little low, Arthur?" He blushed. Arthur was the highly respectable son of an eminently respectable father, who was M. P. and other things. He glanced at the clock, then rose and picked up his hat and gloves. "A stroll!" I finished, with a grin. He laughed merrily. "Look here, Aynsley," he said, "you'll find the governor and Evelyn on the terrace. Do you mind if I run away now?" I got up and laid a hand on his shoulder in a paternal fashion. "She is a woman in a thousand, Arthur. A re-voir and good luck!" He blushed again - he was really a most nervous young man - and hurried away. I followed him out of the hotel, then strolled leisurely through the gardens and round to the terrace. I espied Mr. Verney and his daughter sitting almost immediately in the rear of the casino. I walked up to them. "Well, 'pon my word!" cried Mr. Verney. A smile dimpled round Miss Verney's mouth as she took my hand. I explained lucidly how it was I came to leave London in so unexpected a fashion. "It enlivened us all," I finished, with a graceful wave of my hand toward the casino. "Indeed," said Miss Verney politely. After a few minutes' conversation Mr. Verney pulled out his watch. "I'm very glad you came, Aynsley," he said, "as I left off last night in the midst of a little mathematical experiment with trefre and quartette, and thought that if you would kindly look after Evelyn I'd -" "Delighted!" I said quickly. "I trust the experiment will be brought to a satisfactory conclusion." As soon as he had taken his departure I glanced at Miss Verney. She was examining the handle of her parasol with some intentness. I made a mental note that white suited her admirably - in fact, better than any other girl of my acquaintance. "Perfect weather," I remarked at length. She nodded in a preoccupied manner. "I have been wondering," she said after a moment, "why you came here." "Did you not hear me explain?" I began. She smiled. "Oh, yes, but -" "Surely nothing further is needed. The attraction of Monte Carlo is world famed." "I do not believe, Mr. Aynsley," she said deliberately, "that you have ever gambled in your life." I tried another tack. "Well, then, I'm rather delicate, and the chill, damp fogs of London are rather trying to an invalid." Again Miss Verney laughed. "How unsympathetic you are!" "The deep sea fishing last winter must have been rather bad for you. No, Mr. Aynsley, I'm a clear sighted young person, and I can quite see what has brought you so suddenly to Monte Carlo." "Well?" I said, with an air of indifference. "She played with the tassel on her parasol for a moment. Then she smiled. "Mrs. Fairfax," she said at length. I laughed outright. "How amusing! Nothing of the sort. The usual attraction, I assure you." "Gambling or invalid's natural aversion to chill, damp fogs." "Mrs. Fairfax!" repeated Miss Verney once again, with just a shade of emphasis. "I gave it up." "A very charming person," I said. "You admit it?" and her voice held a tiny note of triumph. "Don't you?" I replied wonderingly. "She is talented, pretty, agreeable and -" "A widow," put in Miss Verney. "Yes, but her husband was hardly more than an acquaintance. He went to India, you know, shortly after their marriage, and was killed. Do you not think her fascinating?" "Yes, undoubtedly she is a pleasant companion." "And I'm a lonely bachelor man!" I remarked apologetically. She turned to me with a smile. "Forgive me," she said kindly, "for reminding you of your pitiful condition. I only meant to show you that I guessed Literary Notes. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, has written out the story of "My First Fight in the Jungle," and has given the manuscript to the Ladies' Home Journal, which will publish it in the next number. Miss Mary E. Wilkins' new serial is the humorous story of an up-to-date city woman who attempts to reform a quiet village and educate the people up to the latest fads of the town. It is called "The Jamesons in the Country," and its serial publication will be commenced in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. It will have Mrs. Alice Barber Stephens as its illustrator.

The editor of Harper's Magazine, Mr. Henry M. Alden, has a daughter who has made a collection of over 100 dolls, each doll representing a different nation and being made in that country. The collection is considered to be the most unique and finest of its kind in existence. Miss Alden is now to show the world her dolls, and explain them. In the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal she will show pictures of the first twenty. In following issues she will show the others.
